Comments

“ One of the best things that happened to me upon marrying my wife, Dayle, whose maiden name was Mishler, was that her family became part of mine, and so her Aunt Grace became my Aunt Grace. Every ensuing visit to Bloomfield over the next thirty-some years included spending time with that very interesting lady, often along with my late mother-in-law, Doris Mishler, (she had married Grace's brother, David, during WWII), and with these visits came the opportunity to learn more of the family history, back into the thirties, as they recalled it and, believe me, they did not always recall it in exactly the same way. Fun times, good memories.
