“ The first memory that comes to mind was towards the end of their 8th grade year. My son had been joking around and ran into a locker. The kid that he was playing with was Brandon. I met him the next day and he was really apologetic and it wasn't even his fault. I talked to him and reassured him that it wasn't his fault, but he still felt bad. He was very kindhearted and really cared about his friend.
