“ When I first met Larry, I didn't know what to make of this crazy old man. Time went on, and I learnd that Larry had a good sense of humor and loved to mess with peoples head. Which I would gleefully take part in. I got to know Larry well, his beliefs, his hobbies and what angers him. Most of all though, I learnd that Larry was kind and accepting, and would bend over backwards for you without anything expected from you. He hid it well with his gruff exterior, but if you bothered to try he would let see his true self. I miss Larry and will continue to do so. Thank you larry you were a pleasure to know.
